McCullough Tells RFK, Jr.: Board Investigation May End His Career — But It Won't Silence Him

Dr. Peter McCullough, an internist, cardiologist, epidemiologist and leading expert on COVID-19 treatment, said in a recent episode of the "RFK Jr. The Defender Podcast" that the American Board of Internal Medicine is threatening to remove his certifications "for political reasons."

The American Board of Internal Medicine has systematically sought to revoke the medical certifications of Dr. Peter McCullough — an internist, epidemiologist, cardiologist and leading expert on COVID-19 treatment.

McCullough is one of the most published cardiologists ever, with more than 1,000 publications and 660 citations in the National Library of Medicine.

"What we're on the verge of seeing in modern day is to have a doctor who is clinically qualified and competent beyond reproach stripped of six years of my life, stripped of my credentials as a practicing doctor for political reasons," McCullough told Robert F. Kennedy, Jr., in a recent episode of "RFK Jr. The Defender Podcast."

People — especially patients — are outraged by the board's actions because they know of McCullough and his impeccable clinical practice record, McCullough said.

In an Oct. 18 letter, the American Board of Internal Medicine informed McCullough that his statements questioning COVID-19 vaccination for healthy people under 50 and his claim that Americans have died after getting a COVID-19 vaccine triggered a review by the board's credential and certification committee.

According to the board's committee, McCullough had "provided false and inaccurate information to the public."

But Kennedy said he thought the committee's own words constituted false and inaccurate medical information.

The committee's key complaint was that McCullough's statements made in "various official forums" posed "serious concerns for patient safety" by "casting doubt on the efficacy of COVID-19 vaccines."

"Moreover," the committee wrote, "they [McCullough's statements] are inimical to the ethics and professionals stands for board certification."

The committee recommended the board revoke McCullough's certifications to practice internal medicine and cardiology and gave him until Nov. 18 to appeal.

McCullough told Kennedy he had already "submitted an immediate request for dismissal based on procedural grounds that this was ex-post facto."

"There was nothing to suggest equal protection," McCullough said. "There was nothing to suggest fair rules of handling evidence and asking for me to respond. And then lastly there was inadequate due process. I asked to attend the meeting or see a transcript [and was granted] nothing."

McCullough said he also asked for dismissal of the committee's recommendation based on substantive grounds.

He explained:

> "They actually declared a risk of COVID — the illness — based on percentages of deaths in age group. And that's not even how the CDC [Centers for Disease Control and Prevention] defines that.
> "The CDC defines it as the case vitality ratio, which I disclosed in my dismissal letter as being less than 1% in the groups that I stated.
> "So when I testified under oath that the risk of death due to COVID was negligible … I'm supported by the CDC and the CDC's own estimate on case fatality ratios."

McCullough doesn't expect the board to honor his request for dismissal, so he will likely submit an appeal, he said, "which will lay the groundwork for a lawsuit" against the American Board of Internal Medicine for threatening to revoke his license.

"I will have to move forward with the lawsuit. The dossier is already exhaustive," McCullough added.

Board never defined 'misinformation'

The American Board of Internal Medicine began its investigation of McCullough in September 2021, when it announced the launch of its COVID-19 "misinformation" initiative — without defining what misinformation is, McCullough said.

The board "just announced" the initiative "without defining what doctors should say or not say or what they thought were appropriate guardrails with no learning modules — nothing."

McCullough pointed out that the term "misinformation" is not a medical term:

> "Misinformation has never been in medical textbooks. It was never on any of the board exams. It's not a medical term … there simply are scientific data. And then there are interpretive points of view."

McCullough said the board went back and reviewed statements McCullough made when he testified before the Texas Senate in March of 2021, and declared he had "uttered misinformation."

Kennedy asked McCullough from where he thinks the board derives its power.

"Where they get their power is as a board offering specialty and subspecialty certification," McCullough said.

"How the power is translated," McCullough explained, "is that as a doctor, I can't contract with insurances for my services without being board-certified. That's actually part of the credentialing with insurances. I can't hold hospital privileges and hospitals."

McCullough believes there are "powerful forces" influencing the board. "I don't think these boards are acting completely independently. Everything I see indicates outside influence."

Whatever the outcome of the board's investigation, McCullough said the board won't succeed in silencing him.

"So they end my career," he said. "What's the obvious response? I'm going to become even more visible and more vocal."

'Patients are the ones harmed' by punishing doctors for COVID 'misinformation'

McCullough also talked about his concern that by punishing doctors for COVID-19 "misinformation," the board is harming patients.

"This idea of misinformation — or this idea that a doctor in any way could have their free speech impaired — is such a threat to patients because what doctors will naturally do is not say anything. And so patients are the ones harmed."

Kennedy and McCullough discussed a new California law that punishes doctors who spread COVID-19 "misinformation."

"Privately, doctors in California have already told me they're not touching COVID with a 10-foot pole," McCullough said. "They're not gonna risk losing their practices and their lives over this."

So it's going to be "the patients who are suffering with COVID, post-COVID syndrome, vaccine problems" who will be negatively impacted by the law.

Medicine is so complex, McCullough said, that doctors need a free range of their full civil liberties to operate.

"Doctors render opinions. They don't give government narratives. Patients seek doctors for opinions and they seek second opinions," he added.

McCullough thinks the board's motivation in targeting him is to "send a message" to the other roughly 300,000 doctors with certifications and say, "Listen, this is what we did to Dr. McCullough. This is a warning to anybody else who is going to speak up against the government narrative."

Kennedy agreed. "It's the same thing they did to [Dr.] Andrew Wakefield," Kennedy said, referring to the de-licensing of Wakefield after he suggested that a possible link between the MMR vaccine and a gastrointestinal disorder that was found in children with autism should be scientifically investigated.

Wakefield and the other 12 co-authors of the seminal 1998 paper (which was later retracted) were all prominent doctors in England. They reported that about 10 of the 11 mothers of children they examined with autism who had gastrointestinal problems said, "Oh, by the way, our child got this problem right after the MMR vaccine."

Wakefield and colleagues said this link should be examined, Kennedy said, but they "never said that the MMR vaccine caused autism."

However, the mere suggestion that this finding should be investigated was enough to spark an intense response from Big Pharma.

"Then all hell broke loose," Kennedy said, "and the medical cartel run by GlaxoSmithKline, which was making the vaccine and is all powerful in England … came down and said 10 of the other physicians all backed down and said, 'Oh, we take it back. It's completely safe. It doesn't cause autism.'"

But, according to Kennedy, Wakefield and one other physician said, "We're not going to do that. We didn't say it did [cause autism], and we're not going to go back and say it didn't."

Then Wakefield got delicensed. "He was destroyed," Kennedy said, "and he was used as an example that if you're a doctor, you better not talk about vaccines because this is what we're going to do."

Do Doctors and Pharmacists have fortitude? The lack of courage, ethics, morals and stamina necessary to END THIS EVIL only displays the DISTRUST FOR THE MEDICAL INDUSTRY NOW COMMONLY FELT AMONG THE PEOPLE. Everybody KNOWS this whole SCAM involving the Medical Industry is led by Monopolist FELON GATES, Fauci and all the Big Pharma kooks in league with the boys at Monsanto and the Fake Food Industry. We know it's time to DEFUND AND DISMANTLE THE WHOLE CURRENT MEDICAL INDUSTRY/CHEMICAL MARKETPLACE.
WERE the Medical Industry to UNITE AND STAND TOGETHER TO FACE DOWN THE BIG PHARMA MONSTERS, RICO Standards would stand in an HONORABLE DOJ/FBI to destroy the Big Pharma/Philanthropathic Predator's PLANS OF ENDLESS PROFIT, POWER/CONTROL AND DEPOPULATION. After all the misery and death this Mob has perpetrated upon the innocent around the world conducting their experiments upon unsuspecting victims; it's HIGH TIME TO END THIS TYRANNY.

Why did "rebel doctors" push ivermectin as THE treatment (apart from HCQ, also a drug) ?

Why did they not push vitamin d and vitamin c, much more effective than ivermectin:
https://rumble.com/v18vvow-high-dose-vitamin-c-can-bring-you-back-from-the-dead.html

Was it because they knew that they would be censored? Or were they protecting their own Rockefeller/Goldman Sachs etc pharma cartel medicine franchise?

https://rumble.com/v18vxp4-susan-wojcicki-complicit-or-dupe.html

Why has ivermectin been oversold?

Agree, the solution is NOT pharma. Also there is NO isolated v1rus so all of this a moot point. It would benefit McCullough to look into this and make a statement just like Yeadon PhD.

I can sympathise with people who are very busy with work and family that when they do get a chance to inform themselves of matters of concern, like the covid 'pandemic', that they would turn on the TV news programs and rely on those sources for information and advice. But for those on medical certification boards, political leaders and their staff, medical journal editors, journalists and MSM news organizations, etc., they know the facts, thus the truth, and are outright lying to the public. A friend of mine went with a tour group to East Germany right after the wall came down in 1989. Part of the itinerary was to visit a concentration camp in Germany. He said that when the bus parked in front of the death camp and all got off, a group of elderly Germans were waiting for them and, almost hysterically he said, insisted that they and most Germans had no idea what was going on inside the concentration camp. He said it was very weird and he wondered who they were really trying to convince of their ignorance or innocence - perhaps themselves. I can imagine that those responsible for the promotions and administering of this deadly vaccine agenda and destroying those who, like Dr. McCullough, are telling the truth of the recklessness and dangers associated with the CV-19 vaccines will in the future also be fervently, desperately lying to themselves and anyone who will listen about the terrible harms that they knowingly inflicted onto so many, worst of all children, just like they are lying now to continue to inflict the harm. The 21st century genocide.

Let ETHICAL BEHAVIOUR be ones 'medical insurance' ('financial insurance is a very neurotic need for endless safety put into play by the powers that shouldn't be!) and stop playing in the game invented by those who call themselves 'elite'.

True. One can have a private practice that insurance does not cover. Certainly for common illnesses, using cheap and effective nutritional treatments, very doable.

A number of years ago, a Director of Legislation and Congressional Liaison for a large government department made a few salient comments to me about the longevity of independent thought concerning newly elected U.S. House Representatives. As a whole, prior to arriving in Washington, this group of people were often idealistic and wanted to make a difference. They tended to be well- educated, intelligent, and successful in their previous employments, Despite all these highly desirable attributes, it took the political parties only a few weeks to set them straight about who was really in charge. Tow the line or the power, prestige, wealth, and other highly sought after benefits would not be theirs. Almost all fell in line.
The same dynamic is at work within our medical system. Instead of the political parties, it is Big Pharma and the FDA/NIH/NIAID that pull the strings. The McCulloughs of the world need to be discredited so that the truth they represent cannot gain traction. It is working quite well as shown by the number of outraged comments to this article.

This is totally unbelievable; we have Dr. McCullough who has saved many lives and is the top of his field who truthfully spoke of the dangers of from the injection and saved many more lives by warning those to not take this dangerous and sometimes deadly injection, while at the same time the people who have been outright killed by hospital protocols of no early treatment with known drugs that have been proven safe, when covid patients did go to the hospital their protocols of using remdesivir and venting which was killing people at extremely high rates and to date none of the hospitals have been held accountable for their deadly protocols. Everything is ass backwards and our medical system has become a complete and utterly a failure, it has nothing to do with patient care but the almighty dollar and they have absolutely no ethics and those doctors that continue to work under this system are no better than the system they work in.

The committee's key complaint was that McCullough's statements made in "various official forums" posed "serious concerns for patient safety" by "casting doubt on the efficacy of COVID-19 vaccines."

The Covid shot has itself, proven to lack efficacy. Walenski has had several Covid shots and has had Covid-19 multiple times.

If the committee cared about patient safety, they would pay attention to the numerous people suffering from Covid injection injuries.

The nurse's will continue the fight against this tyranny. When I saw Dr. Fauci's face appear on tv in March 2020, I knew we were all in for a hard ride. I took care of AIDS patients in 1984, and it's appalling how Dr. Fauci experimented on AIDS patients, and foster children who did not have AIDS, forced to be in drug experimentation. I will be passing on pharmaceutical drug trials.

I've paid attention to vaccines and the damage they cause for some 30 years but I'm no expert. However, during that time I've learned a lot about the type of people who force a doctor out of his profession with bureaucratic cudgels and news media castigation. I am far more likely to give the benefit of doubt to the persecuted professional than I am the sleazy bureaucrat or politician.

bs"d Nobody escapes the mRNA. I have heard that it is added to the chemicals (i.e. aluminum, manganese, strontium, barium, and one other) which are sprayed from passenger-planes that are equipped with special spraying equipment, and sprayed into the very long white stripes we see across the skies on some days. This way they can affect even those who managed to evade ejection. They feel it is so important. The elements of CV19 vaccine serum, the signs of the structures that grow in the bloodstream after injection, by now are showing in bodily fluids emitted by those who were NOT injected; for coverage of this please visit Red Voice Media. It could be either from the SRM (geoengineering) or from shedding by those humans who were injected.

bs"d They're not thinking of medicine or of law any more; they are under peer pressure from WEF, WHO, and the directorship of Pfizer, as well as the people who were at the Rio conference, who created Agenda 21 and are following up with Agenda 2030... .they are worried that the death rate is not high enough and that they are behind on the depopulation plan, and, for all their elitism, they suffer from terrible inferiority complexes because they do not believe that, morally, they are able to rise above the temptation to let everyone die by this combination of deception and toxic treatments, because they do not believe that very many people can survive the upcoming natural-disaster cataclysms, unless the people are cyborgized or hybridized, not realizing that these processes are recipes for death by various means simultaneously, for most if not all individuals (of course, DARPA supposedly has backup EM's for each person)... that's the real push for vaccination, to kill those that can't tolerate the transhumanism-promoting elements in the serum, and to modify those who can stay functional and to connect them to a central quantum computer, and, this may sound to you like a crazy conspiracy theory, but truth is stranger than fiction. At this point the preservation of humanity is very crucial, and the policy makers say that's what they are doing with the vaccines, but, I think they are deceiving themselves. I think they're choosing a deadly path and forcing others to walk that path. The situation is extremely concerning. I am posting in memory of Carrie Madej, may her courageous blood be avenged.

I'm going to say that medicine has never been an exact science and though guided by science, it has often been recognized as more "art" than science. A centralized healthcare system is using technology and AI to intrude in the patient/doctor relationship and to literally dictate care at the bedside. A centralized healthcare system led by individuals who are emboldend to big tech and big pharma and who frankly, think the biggest threat to the planet is overpopulation

Dr McCullough's protocol saved our lives in October of 2021. I know he has saved countless tens of thousands of lives, at the very least. Dr. McCullough's courage and wisdom is unparalleled. Thank you, Dr. McCullough.
I developed my own resistance to THE VACCINE in March of 2021 as I was doing my own independent research on them. Our family of three (including one then-minor child who, at the time, was a recent solid organ transplant recipient) remained Covid-19 vaccine-free from then until now. And we will remain so. We utilized the McCullough protocol when we did contract Covid-19, and we all recovered and now have natural immunity. I pray the world will wake up soon, before it is too late.

Its a long reach of the arm of FSMB from America to New Zealand.
https://rumble.com/v1lbjvd-...

Dr Dooley discusses what he learned about the Federation of State Medical Boards (FSMB) and its international arm, the International Association of Medical Regulatory Authorities (IAMRA) and how the Medical Council of New Zealand (MCNZ) is involved.

The FSMB is a private organisation that has captured, and probably controls, medical councils around the world, including the MCNZ. They purportedly exist to prevent harm to the public. However, with no public governance, it is the FSMB that decides what "harm" or "questionable health care practice" is. The doctors and the public do not get a say. While at present we cannot point to evidence, it would be interesting to know, whether the pharmaceutical inducstry has any influence on these organisations. As far back as 1999 the FSMB's Special Committee on Health Care Fraud stated:.........
